Potential positive implications from Uber's strategic interest in MENA food delivery

Uber's stakebuilding in Delivery Hero (OW, covered by Marcus Diebel) and Careem Tech, in our view, highlight strategic interest in the MENA food delivery industry and a catalyst for the Street to revisit Talabat's investment case. Despite the early days and high uncertainty of the outcome at this stage, we believe that any potential partnership between Talabat (owned by Delivery Hero) and Careem may lead to rationalisation of competitive dynamics and unlock synergies. Whilst Talabat's share price seems already to reflect better sentiment with the shares up 39% over the last 7 trading sessions, we see further upside if long-term industry profitability can reset higher: we estimate every 50bps sustainable Adj. EBITDA margin uplift would translate into a 10% increase in Talabat's fair value, all else equal. Absent some degree of industry consolidation, we believe that the fundamental backdrop for Talabat would remain challenging.

- Uber's stake build in Delivery Hero and Careem Tech signals the attraction of the MENA food delivery market. On 18th May Uber (covered by Doug Anmuth) increased its stake in DHER to 19.5%, reportedly made an offer to buy out the entire stake in Delivery Hero (source: FT) and has now further increased its stake to 36.83%. In addition, Uber yesterday announced an agreement to purchase 12.5% of Careem Tech from e& (covered by Karin So), becoming a majority shareholder, which we believe complements Uber's fully owned Careem ride hailing business in the region. We see both transactions as an indication of Uber's strategic interest in the MENA food delivery space. Careem's GTV has grown at a healthy 47–117% y/y over the last four quarters, though recent headwinds including reported layoffs, closure of delivery services in Saudi, and EBITDA-level losses in the e& Life segment where Careem's financials are reported, suggest the business has been facing cost pressures and could benefit from a more rational market environment / partnership with a leading aggregator like Talabat.
- Uber's recent acquisitions in Turkey underscore synergy potential among company-owned assets. Uber has already demonstrated a willingness to integrate assets in adjacent markets: in February, it acquired 100% of Getir's delivery operations in Turkey alongside an additional 15% stake in its grocery and water delivery business, which followed the acquisition of an 85% stake in Trendyol Go in May 2025. Post-Getir acquisition, Uber announced plans to integrate Getir and Trendyol Go where Getir app users gain access to additional restaurants from Trendyol Go, while Trendyol Go users can order Getir's grocery products through the Trendyol Go app. We believe that a similar playbook may be applied to Uber's assets in MENA.
- Despite the early days and high uncertainty on outcome at this stage, we believe that any potential partnership between Talabat (owned by Delivery Hero) and Careem may lead to rationalisation of competitive dynamics and unlock synergies. Talabat's share price seems already to reflect better sentiment with the shares up 39% over the last 7 trading sessions (vs

Investment Thesis, Valuation and Risks

Talabat (Neutral; Price Target: Dh1.10)

Investment Thesis

Talabat is the leading food and grocery delivery platform in the Middle East. Talabat enjoys unparalleled scale and healthy margins with its powerful network effect, which has prompted Keeta to expand in its markets. After a stellar 27% y/y GMV growth in 2025 and a 25% CAGR in 2023-25, alongside a 40bps expansion in EBITDA/GMV margin, Talabat guided to an unimpressive outlook for consolidated GMV growth (11-14% y/y) despite a substantial 140-180bps investment of margin and an incremental 20bps in capex. There is a lack of clarity on the ROI of the planned investments, which reduces our conviction in the earnings outlook beyond 2026, and our work suggests that the announced investments for 2026 do not seem significant enough for the core food vertical in GCC, where competition has heated up; hence, we are no longer certain that 2026 will be the year of investment peak. Whilst Talabat's earnings and FCF multiples screen attractively compared to global food delivery players, compared to the UAE-listed stocks its dividend yield (one of the core valuation metrics for investors in this market) screens in line, underscoring that the stock does not screen as cheaply vs the market it trades in. Our analysis suggests that in the context of lower expected growth (JPMe 5% EBITDA CAGR in 2026-28E) and visibility, the valuation looks fair. We rate the shares Neutral.

Valuation

We value Talabat using a DCF model with a 10-year horizon, 12.0% WACC and 3% terminal growth rate. Our Dec-27 PT is AED1.1/sh.

Explanation of Equity Research Ratings, Designations and Analyst(s) Coverage Universe:

J.P. Morgan uses the following rating system: Overweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will outperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); Neutral (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will perform in line with the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe); and Underweight (over the duration of the price target indicated in this report, we expect this stock will underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe. NR is Not Rated. In this case, J.P. Morgan has removed the rating and, if applicable, the price target, for this stock because of either a lack of a sufficient fundamental basis or for legal, regulatory or policy reasons. The previous rating and, if applicable, the price target, no longer should be relied upon. An NR designation is not a recommendation or a rating. Some stocks under coverage have a rating but no price target; in these cases, we expect the stock will outperform/perform in line/underperform the average total return of the stocks in the Research Analyst's, or the Research Analyst's team's, coverage universe of the relevant duration of the region. In our Asia (ex-Australia and ex-India) and U.K. small- and mid-cap Equity Research, each stock's expected total return is compared to the expected total return of a benchmark country market index, not to those Research Analysts' coverage universe.
